

NHS Blood and Transplant – Lay Member - Biography

Julia Mackisack

Julia spent most of her working life in the field of marketing and change communications, starting in the Birmingham gun trade and culminating in a role as director and board advisor at the Gambling Commission, the gambling regulator in Great Britain. Her eclectic career included running a successful retail business dealing in designer clothes, working with the RAF Association as Head of Marketing, plus several years in financial services, where she saw Britannic Assurance through the change from a life assurance company to a mergers and acquisitions company.

She retired in 2015 and now works with people with a learning disability to help them live independently.

She has been a school governor and a director of St George's, a charity looking after women with a learning disability.
