

Treating anaemia with an iron infusion

If you are more than 34 weeks or anaemia is making you very unwell, you may receive an iron infusion into your veins. This usually takes place in the hospital and does not require an overnight stay.

A blood test to check your haemoglobin will be repeated at two to three weeks after you have started treatment with iron.

