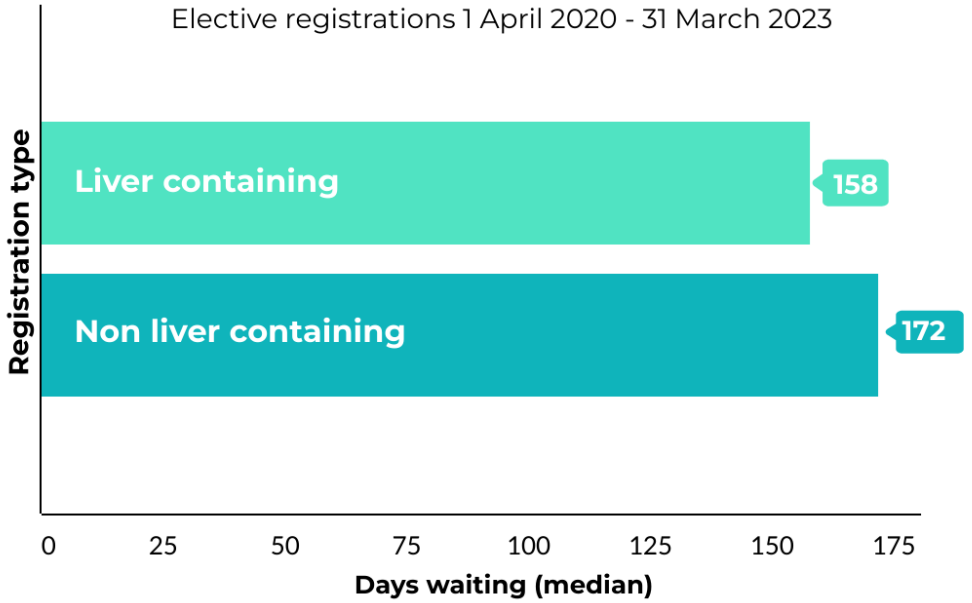
ADULT INTESTINAL TRANSPLANTS

How long do adults wait for an elective intestinal transplant?

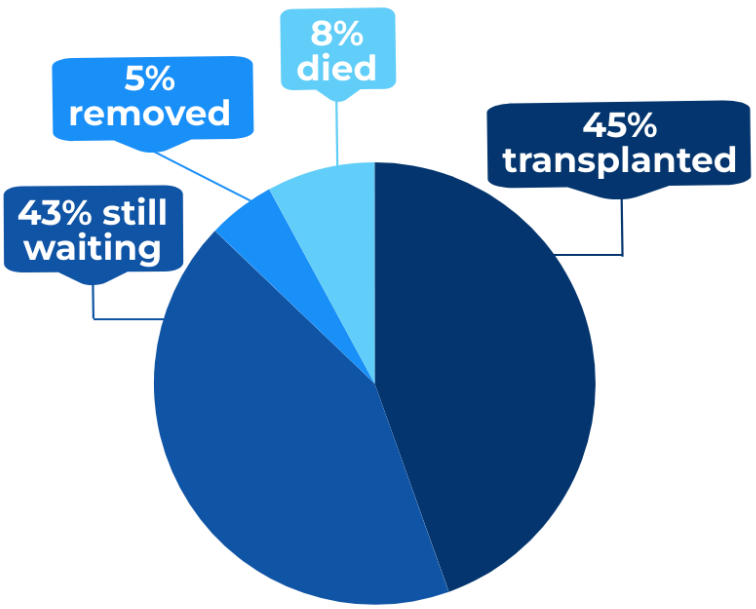


The median is a type of average and is the time when half of patients have received a transplant

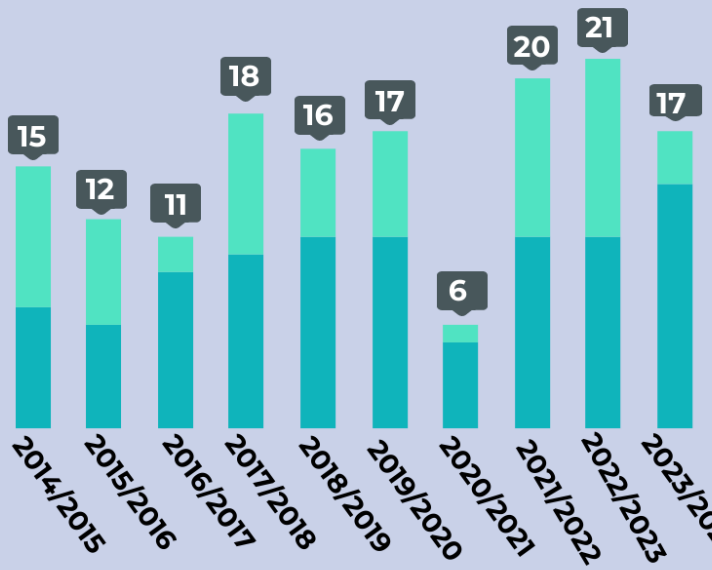
Overall median waiting time to intestine transplant for registrations between 1 April 2020 and 31 March 2023 was 175 days, or 6 months.

Lots of things affect how long you might wait, including your blood group, sensitisation and the availability of the right size organs

Nationally, 6 months after going on the elective list



Overall number of transplants per year between 1 April 2014 - 31 March 2024



What are the chances of an surviving for one year after transplant?

On average, 77 out of 100 patients are alive after one year following elective intestinal transplant where a liver was transplanted and 86 out of 100 where a liver was not transplanted

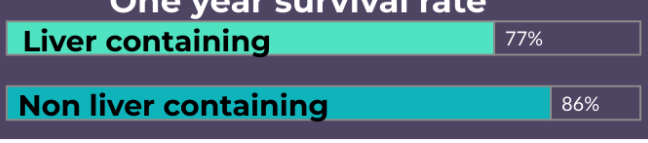
One year survival rate



What are the chances of an surviving for five years after transplant?

On average, 60 out of 100 patients are alive after five years following elective intestinal transplant where a liver was transplanted and 69 out of 100 where a liver was not transplanted

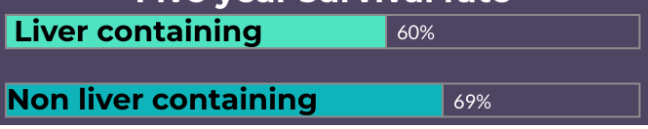
Five year survival rate



FOR FULL DETAILS:

https://www.odt.nhs.uk/statistics-and-reports/organ-specific-reports/

NHS Blood and Transplant